The New Ki Collection designed by Nendo for Scavolini Elegant and Minimal Environment

The new Ki collection by Nendo for Scavolini interprets design as surprise, experimentation and refined details. With this project, Scavolini envisions new ways of inhabiting space, with the pivotal element - the container - resting on linear-shaped shelves. What emerges is an actual storage system that dominates compositions designed for both kitchens and bathrooms, with Scavolini Bathrooms. For this environment, the container replaces traditional wall units and also defines the washbasin, offered in the sit-on, inset and freestanding versions. The mirrors, rigorous slabs resting on the tops and against the walls, conceal a practical LED lighting system. The lights - in the suspension or wall version - are an additional furnishing element and were specifically designed for this collection, similarly to the free-standing towel rails which can also house one of the containers.

Ki Kitchens for Scavolini

Designed by Nendo

The Ki collection combines the prestigious Italian craftsmanship of Scavolini and the distinctive approach of Nendo, the Japanese studio headed by Oki Sato, which interprets design as surprise, experimentation and refined details. The Ki concept is trying to make the kitchen "hidden" in two objects to create space and offer complete design freedom: a container, an unique object with a strong connotation, synthesis of an expressive code that can be repeated ad infinitum and a wooden shelf of pure essentiality. The collection reveals a rigorous interpretation of minimalistic and extremely contemporary taste, and embodies exclusive values, creative thinking, innovative challenges, on-going research, genuine Italian quality and finely worked details.
